WOMEN EMPOWERMENT CELL

REPORT

Eminent personality Asian Karate Academy and Judo Training centre, Master-Rathna Devi, gave an inspiring speech for "Self Defence Techniques". The young students of female gender motivated them to be more confident and self dependent.

Master Rathna Devi, said Having the training and skills to protect you in a threatening situation is empowering. The skills we learn through a Martial arts practice go far beyond a one-day self-defence training class.

If you're serious about learning self-defence, a one-day seminar is not your best course of action. However, a short workshop could be the trigger to motivate you to sign up for Martial arts classes.

Let's face Martial arts. As we get older, it becomes more challenging to meet and make new friends. Martial arts offer a welcoming environment where you can meet new people and connect with others. But you will have a shared interest in learning martial arts.

Martial arts changes how you feel about yourself. You'll develop valuable skills like focus, discipline, resilience, and confidence. Not only will you feel more confident, but you'll also look more confident.

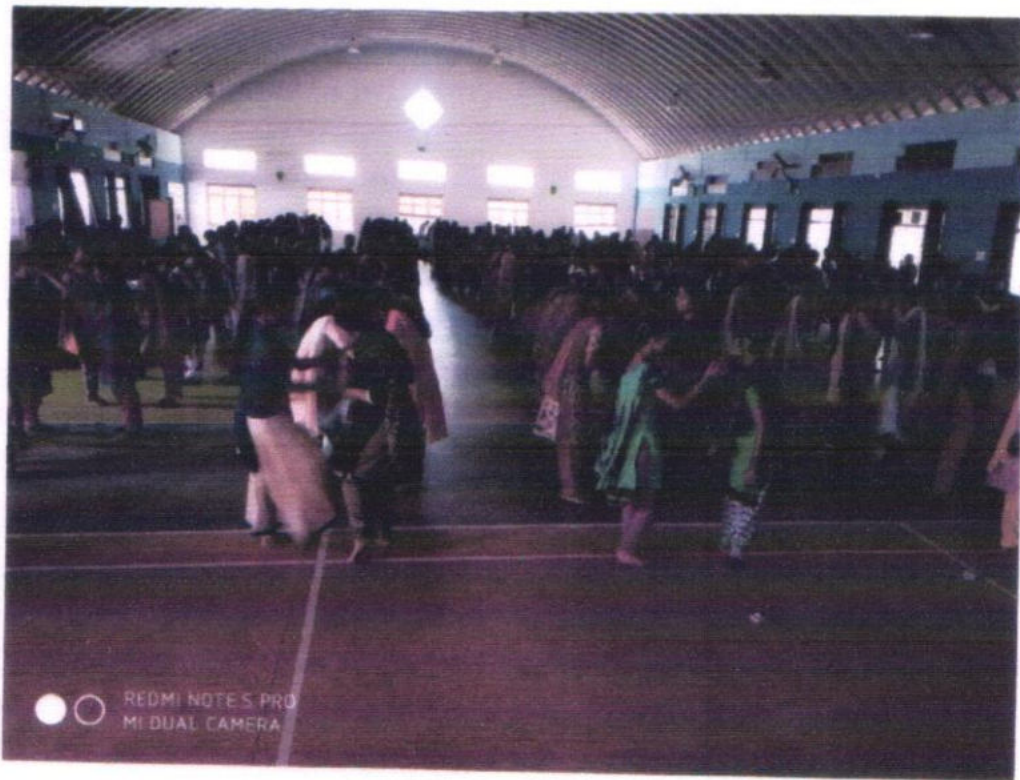

As you become more physically fit, you'll find yourself standing up straighter and walking taller and with more confidence. Knowing that you have learned the skills to defend yourself in any scary situation is empowering. Your confidence will begin on the mats and then carry into other areas of your life.

The whole day went smoothly and makes us to courageous, the day was very useful.
